

Non-Medical Volunteers: Mission Historian

The Mission Historian is responsible for recording the visual and personal stories of the missions. With a digital camera, a pen and curiosity, s/he will create a visual story for those watching from home that focuses on the color, drama and beauty of the fast-paced medical mission. S/he is expected to write a daily blog and post it to Wordpress. The blog is reviewed by the Rotaplast family, donors, the team's friends and the general public to keep abreast of our missions in real time, and as a memoir throughout the year.

Knowledge of the local language is helpful in order to interview patients, hospital staff, officials and families. The Mission Historian also assists the Medical Records Keeper during Opening Day Clinic, and will take 'before' images on pre-clinic day for Medical Records.

Upon completion of the mission, the Mission Historian will provide Rotaplast with 150 to 300 of their best photos on the thumb drive provided by the Mission Director.
